

“It’s Going Down” at the Tappa Tappa Keg and Quad Delt Mixer

BY CAROLINE PICARD

SOUTH FRAT QUAD—New members of Greek organizations Tappa Tappa Keg and Delta Delta Delta Delta attended their first mixer Saturday.

Delighted to talk to members of the opposite sex for the first time in over a week, Quad Delt’s new pledge class was extremely eager to get to know the true gentlemen of TTK in addition to their “AMΔΔΔΔZING” sisters, one of whom may or may not be named Sharon.¹

“It’s so great to finally go out and do all of the things that I was expressly forbidden from talking about during recruitment but were the sole reasons I joined my sorority,” Quad Delt freshman Kelly Stone said.

After cramming onto the 10:34 shuttle with the rest of the Panhellenic community, Quad Delt went to TTK’s house² for a Wear Less Clothing³ themed pregame.

The night kicked off with the girls pretending to understand the rules of slap cup while inevitably passing the cup to the wrong person on four consecutive occasions. After becoming sufficiently beer-soaked, the attendees had a sweaty dance party to hits including “Timber,” “Wrecking Ball,” and then “Timber” again.

Other highlights of the night included TTK junior Dave Walberg and Quad Delt Lucy Goldstein hooking up for the sixth time since coming back from break, but it is still “definitely not a thing.”

¹ Possibly Sarah, or, chances are, Emily.

² Also formerly known as belonging to Beta Delta Ksi, which was then leasing it from Phi Kappa Delta, which bought it from Rho Tau Sigma after the tragic Lake Michigan Hazing Incident of 1973.

³ Originally planned as a Wear Tighter Clothing themed pregame.

Skinhead Street Artist Upset No One Appreciates His Work

BY TYLER DASWICK

EVANSTON — After critics described it as insensitive, hateful, and absolutely putrid, area skinhead Steve “The Artful Aryan” Sanger just cannot believe his latest carved swastika is receiving such negative feedback.

“I really thought it was my best one yet,” said Sanger, referring to the piece of Nazi symbolism that he recently etched into the side of a local car. “I thought it really captured the message of white supremacy and superiority that the National Socialist German Worker’s Party strives to instill in the ignorant modern world, and people just blew up over it.”

At first, Sanger was pleased with the amount of attention his work was receiving, but when he realized the reviews and comments about his art were consistently poor, his excitement quickly gave way to disappointment.

“This was supposed to be my breakthrough,” said Sanger, who had worked tirelessly to make sure that each branch of the symbol was of equal length and angle. “Ever since the time my buddies and I went downtown and had emblems of the Third Reich tattooed across our chests, art has been my life.

It sure sucks to see all of these people not respond to it like you hope.”

Other artistic efforts from Sanger, who assured reporters that he hates Jews, [African-Americans], [Mexicans], [Asians], gypsies, and [homosexuals] with equal passion, have also gone without acclaim.

A recent piece titled “Kill all the

*ing s” was reamed by local authorities, and “Eat my white * you *ing pieces of ignorant *” received less-than-favorable reviews. (The piece on the car was similarly titled, “Take this * you * *-ass *****.”)

Despite this most recent setback to his artistic career, Sanger was adamant that he would return to the scene sometime down the road. “This just means that I have to be bigger and better in the future,” he said, scratching the head that he shaved bare as a symbol of his social rebellion. “You guys just wait—you ain’t seen nothing yet”

View More Online at NORTHWESTERNFLIPSIDE.COM

Search for The Northwestern Flipside iPhone app

NU Engaging in Cover-Up That Will Shock You in 10 Years

BY ALEX GORDON

EVANSTON — Right now, as you read this article, key members of the Northwestern University administration are actively working to conceal evidence of a large and ongoing university-wide scandal that will affect and offend you in about ten years.

“I would suggest that Northwestern students try to get a job or internship as soon as possible, because your degree will pretty much be garbage once this leaks,” said a University official who refused to be named although you will certainly know his name after the scandal leaks in 2024.

“I really just hope that we can keep a lid on this until I die, which is pretty feasible,” said a healthy 23-year-old secretary at the Feinberg School of Medicine as he carefully coached his coworkers on how to feign gross incompetence in the event of an investigation.

“We’re not bad people and we didn’t start this,” said a high-ranking Northwestern faculty member who the reporters of 2024 will agree was a bad person who started the scandal.

“On the bright side, a Medill student might bust the story on this one, which would definitely guarantee some sort of Pulitzer,” said a major Northwestern University official as he gingerly fed documents into a paper shredder.

“I look forward to earning the first Pulitzer for Sherman Ave,” confirmed Sara Lin, a 7-year-old child who will be a freshman at the Medill School of Journalism in a decade.

“Luckily, none of this could reflect poorly on our athletic department or our past athletic accomplishments. Those beauties will remain the unstained jewels of Northwestern University after everything else goes to shit,” said a masked Chris Collins. He proceeded to shoot and kill a witness of the scandal.

University Anti-Career Services Urges Students to Watch Netflix

BY BRIAN CAPELLA

EVANSTON — Northwestern University Anti-Career Services issued a press release Tuesday that included instructions on how not to further one’s career. It read: “In this day and age, students are subject to immense amounts of pressure to get a good job and make a lot of money. It’s our job to counter this ridiculous notion. To that end, we are urging all undergraduate students to watch at least eleven hours of Netflix per day.”

The Northwestern Anti-Career Services office was founded seven years ago in response to the increasing prevalence of pre-professionalism. Since then, it has grown into one of the largest offices on campus, employing many students to accomplish the goal of keeping students unemployed.

Park Mesnell, Executive Director for University Anti-Career Services was adamant about his office’s position on the matter. “I can’t believe the number of people that attend job fairs. Don’t these people have something better to do than waste away their lives by getting jobs? It makes me sick.”

Mesnell’s office has been working hard to alleviate the problem. “Up until last year, students at Northwestern had access to NUTV, which brought cable TV to students on campus. Last year, however, Northwestern decided to terminate this program.” Mesnell described how this termination at first hampered his department’s goals, and continued, “Our office sees an opportunity here, and we have been advocating purchasing a Netflix subscription for every NU student to replace NUTV.”

When asked if this was the only move that the department recommended to curtail the unacceptable levels of pre-professionalism on Northwestern’s campus, Mesnell responded, “Meeting your daily Netflix quota of eleven-plus hours is only the first step on the road to recovery. We recommend consuming between four and seventy-two family size bags of Cheetos per week. Additionally, students are strongly encouraged to meet the standard consumption of at least four sleeves of Oreos per hour.”

Jodi Smithens, Communications sophomore and Allison resident, was shocked when she heard the news. “I can’t believe this announcement. That Mesnell guy’s attitude toward students is ridiculous. I can’t believe he would have the audacity to insinuate that we don’t already watch at least eleven hours of Netflix a day. And I passed the ‘four-sleeves-an-hour’ mark long ago.”

When confronted about the many activist groups that promote healthy eating and being active, Mesnell quickly responded, “I hate those groups. Always telling people to exercise and get off the couch. Revolting. To fully counter pre-professionalism, we recommend that students not leave their couch for any reason, ever.”

The interview with Mesnell was cut short when he informed us that he had only watched five hours of Netflix that day and was gravely behind.

THIS IS SATIRE! All names and stories are fictional, unless public figures are mentioned.

Have a comment, suggestion, or question? Email contact@northwesternflipside.com. See more content at NUFLIPSIDE.COM.